

PERCEIVED EDUCATIONAL TECHNOLOGY NEEDS SURVEY

Ted Wesley

[former doctoral student with Dr. Anderson. Ted is now "Dr. Wesley"]

This survey questionnaire is intended to obtain information from teachers and other instructional personnel about their own perceptions of technological needs with respect to their specific responsibilities and working situations. The questionnaire is intended to be administered by allowing respondents to keep it with them in their workplace for approximately five days. Respondents may make entries to the instrument as they are moved to do so by events which occur during the course of their work. Respondents may repeat particular responses if they are relevant to more than one survey item.

Note to the respondent:

Please keep this questionnaire in your possession for the survey interval in your usual work location while performing your customary duties. Make entries to the items as appropriate responses occur to you. Your responses will help inform the technology planning process about the best application of technologies in your teaching situation.

While performing your duties:
